Council Sets Date Court of Revision

Garden Lots in Demand; Auditors Appointed for 1939; Council Supports Fixed Price for Wheat; Committees Now Fixed.

Following is a record of the proceedings of the council of the Town of Wainwright at its regular meeting on Tuesday, March 21st.

The declaration of the Returning Officer as to the election of Mr. W. J. Huntington as a councillor of the Town of Wainwright to fill the unexpired term of Mr. H. C. Link, resigned, and the assurance of the Secretary-Treasurer that Mr. Huntington had signed the necessary declaration were presented to council, when Councillor Huntington took his seat as a member of council.

The members of council present at this meeting were Mayor Middlemas and Councillors Lismore, Robinson, Billing, Cork and Huntington.

The recorded proceedings of council at its regular meeting of March 13, 1939, were read and, on motion by Councillor Cork, were adopted and confirmed as written.

On motion by Mayor Middlemas, the name of Councillor Huntington was substituted for that of Mr. H. C. Link on the various standing committees of council.

Notice of membership fee in the Union of Alberta Municipalities was received and, on motion by Councillor Lismore, it was resolved that, as the fee of $15.00 is greater than benefits to accrue, membership be not considered at this time.

Notice was received from the Wainwright School District No. 1668 of requiring $1,600 at April 1st, next, to meet expenses in March, 1939 and, on motion by Councillor Lismore, authority was granted for the issuing of a cheque of $1,600 to that district this month to be included in the next financial report.

On motion by Councillor Robinson, council ordered that a cheque for $9.43 be issued in favor of the Wainwright Gas Company Limited as payment of gas arrears of Mr. Edmund Messier. Mr. Messier having signed an order against wages in favor of the town.

On motion by Councillor Robinson, the reply of the Town of Hanna to the inquiry of the Town of Wainwright was filed for further consideration.

The following applications for the use of forfeited lots for gardening purposes were presented to council, viz: M. G. Cardell for Lots 32-38 in Block 12, Plan 6445V; John Alderman, Sr., for Lot 11 in Block 22, Plan 6445V; G. L. Gregson, for Lot 3 in Block 22, Plan 6445V; and Fred Sheffield for Lots 25 and 26 in Block 2, Plan 6445V, and on motion by Councillor Billing, permission in each case was given for leasing of the above lots to the applicants on the usual terms.

Messrs. Patriguin and Johnstone, Chartered Accountants, made a written application for appointment as auditors for the Town of Wainwright for the current year, on motion by Councillor Cork, this firm was appointed auditors for the current year on the terms of application.

Messrs. T. W. Brunner and F. E. McLeod wrote council requesting a covenant to drain the vacant land between the Elite Theatre and the McLeod Store building and, on motion by Councillor Huntington, this matter was left in the hands of the Public Works Committee for investigation and report.

Season's Smartest Comedy at Elite

The show booked for this week end at the Elite theatre is an extraordinarily successful adaptation by Vina Delmar of a play by Arthur Richman which has its own substantial place among the footlight favorites. Starring Irene Dunne and Cary Grant in what may be set down with reasonable immunity from contradiction as their best performances to date, "The Awful Truth" features Ralph Bellamy, Alexander Darcy and Cecil Cunningham in a cast in which Joyce Compton and Esther Dale are also to be quite emphatically noted. In common with all good comedies this picture realises synchronization. It's a story about two wealthy young married folk who get a 90-day interlocutory divorce decree while in a huff, but manage after amusing complications to dissolve it by mutual consent and co-operation a split second before midnight of the 90th day.

On motion by Councillor Lismore, authority of council was granted for the issuing of a cheque for $5.00 in favor of Mr. Sid Bibby for the moving of the rink waiting room in the autumn of 1938, this amount to be included in the next financial report of the Finance Committee.

The Fire, Light and Utilities Committee submitted the following report, viz:

We have interviewed the Town Solicitor in connection with the matter of the granting of their consent to the replacement of one-third of the present 150-watt street lamps now in use, with 250-watt lamps at no extra cost to the Town; and the matter of consenting to make effective an optional contract for commercial customers of the Town. It is the opinion of our solicitor that the above-referred-to changes in no way affect the Town's position with respect to the franchise between the Calgary Power Co. and the Town of Wainwright in its present value or legal operation.

Your committee therefore recommend that the above changes be immediately agreed to.

In view of the fact that the Town has established a building restriction fire zone for the purpose of securing a low rate of insurance in town, and whereas the Town has agreed in a permit for permission to build in this zone with other than solid materials as fire protection, we would therefore draw the attention of the Bylaws Committee that the building permit on Lots 25-26, Block 5, Plan 6445V must specify solid material to comply with the bylaw.

We further recommend that our policeman be instructed to check and take delivery of all lumber, material and equipment used in the operation of the skating rink, and turn in a report to the secretary-treasurer when the rink is closed.

Hope for Large Oil Fields In Wainwright District

The prospects of finding equally as large quantities of oil in other suitable structures of the foothills as in Turner valley are regarded by G. S. Hume, Dominion Government Geologist, as being highly favorable. A tremendous and rich volume of source materials were required to fill the 6,500-foot gas and oil column in Turner Valley, he states, and it may be safely assumed that these source materials are not confined to this area.

In this connection he points out in his paper on the oil situation in Alberta appearing in a bulletin of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, that the foothills are a structural unit 12 to 20 miles wide, extending from the International Boundary 800 miles northwest to Liard River in the Northwest Territories. Much of this area is imperfectly known, and has complicated geological structure.

There is no doubt, the paper notes, that a great impetus to market expansion would be given by the discovery in the foothills of one or two new oil fields of large capacity. Many structures within the foothills regarded as favorable have either not been drilled as yet, or have been inadequately tested. A few others formerly regarded as favorable have been drilled and are now condemned. Among the structures drilled, but in which the prospects are still believed to be favorable, is the Jumping-pound anticline, 20 miles west of Calgary. Two deep tests and two shallow tests were drilled on this field, but both of the former drilled through a major fault, and thus apparently served only to outline the eastern edge of the structure. Accordingly, a decisive test has yet to be undertaken, and as matters now stand, this anticline is considered to be the most promising prospective structure studied in the foothills.

In reference to the oil prospects of the Plains, the statement is made that the widespread occurrence of oil in the area south of North Saskatchewan River and north of Wainwright and Ribstone leads to the hope that, eventually, large oil-fields will develop in this section of country, although the difficulties of production need further expert study.

The paper concludes with a discussion of the oil situation in the north of the province, where the oil fields are more numerous and the prospects are more favorable. It is noted that the oil fields in the north are more numerous and the prospects are more favorable. It is noted that the oil fields in the north are more numerous and the prospects are more favorable.

D. FORSTER WINS SNAPSHOT PRIZE

SKIERS IN FRONT OF A SETTING SUN

Doris Forster of Wainwright, Alta., took this picture to win first prize in the weekly snapshot contest. It was one of two pictures which she submitted.—Courtesy Edmonton Journal.

First prize in last week's snapshot contest was won by Doris Forster, of Wainwright, who submitted a snap of three skiers silhouetted against a setting sun. Journal editors selected her entry after sifting through several hundred pictures sent in by readers.

To Miss Forster was sent a cheque for $3 as first prize. Snapshot entries are invited in the weekly contests. They must be turned in each week by Wednesday midnight.

Jasper Park Lodge To Open Earlier

Jasper Park Lodge, in Jasper National Park, Alberta, will open to the public on June 3rd this year instead of the regular opening date of June 15th, states Mr. Joseph Van Wyck, general manager of hotels for the Canadian National System. Jasper will be at its very best when the open July 1st. Minaki Lodge in the beautiful Lake of the Woods country in Western Ontario will open June 28th; Pictou Lodge in charming Nova Scotia opens June 23rd.

Arrangements Now Definite Royal Visit

The Edmonton Royal Visit Committee wishes through the medium of the press to thank the many municipal officials and individuals for their co-operation in advising the Committee as to seating reservations required on the occasion of the visit of their Majesty the King and Queen to the city on June 2nd.

The Committee at present is endeavoring to work out a scheme to facilitate the sale of advance tickets and hopes soon to make public the price that will be charged for reserved seats for adults and hopes that the price per seat will not exceed $1.00.

In order to ensure the utmost comfort, particularly for school children, the committee has arranged for public comfort stations to be provided in connection with all public stands, and in addition the First Aid Committee is providing nursing and medical services in case of emergency.

An official program will be issued by the Committee. This program will be sold exclusively by the Canadian League of Edmonton and its various branches throughout the northern part of the Province.

Applications for reserved space on bleachers are being received daily by the committee from various communities and it is hoped that the various local committees will endeavor to furnish the Royal Visit Committee with accurate information as to the number of adults and school children that will visit Edmonton as soon as possible as the committee must give preference in the order that applications for reservations are received.

The public is invited to listen in every Friday evening from 5:35 to 6:45 (C.P.N. and C.J.C.A.) when full information will be given as to the arrangements being made.

Mr. Hutchinson ably responded, expressing his gratitude to the many friends they have made during the past years. Dancing was resumed until the early hours of the morning.

At midnight an enjoyable lunch was served by the ladies and Miss Della Chynoweth, after an appropriate farewell address, presented the honored couple with a beautiful silver service.

Happy Party at Whist Melee

By way of variety, whist melee was played at the card party put on by Connaught Chapter, O.E.S., on Friday evening last. Although the crowd was not as large as was hoped for, due no doubt to numerous other functions those present thoroughly enjoyed themselves, and expressed the hope for another evening of this new popular pastime in the near future.

Following the cards, tables were laid and a dainty lunch served by the committee in charge of arrangements. Prize winners included: Mrs. F. Thurston, 1; Mrs. H. Schilt, 2, for the ladies, and Mr. Fred Roy, 1 and Mr. V. Nelson and Mr. L. Roy tying for 2nd in the gentlemen's card. Up on drawing, the latter gentlemen was a member for some 26 years.

A short dance to music supplied by Miss E. Fish and Mr. A. Adams wound up a pleasant evening.

HARVESTING METHODS
Revolutionized

A harvest of 324 million bushels of wheat, to say nothing of the increased volume of coarse grains, and all of it brought in and threshed in 1938 without the assistance of the erstwhile army of tens of thousands of harvest help from the East in the years not so long gone by.

Thus does the mode of our lives and the methods of our callings change, keeping pace with the progress being made in the scientific engineering and industrial realms.

The evolution of the Combine to the small, compact model now made available has revolutionized harvesting, making it easily undertaken task for the regular help of the farm. Its production at a cost to the farmer of but one-third the price of the earlier, bigger models, is an evidence of the contribution made by the implement maker to help the farmer meet the problems with which he is confronted. The lower operating costs of this machine, and the reduction it enables to be made in the cost of harvesting, saving as it does up to 15c a bushel for complete harvesting, has meant, in a great many instances, a profit instead of a loss to the farmer.

Power of course is the basis of the great mechanistic progress of agriculture and the record of attainment in making more efficient, less costly, and lower operating cost models available is an achievement that cannot be beaten by any other industry. To-day's modern streamlined, high efficiency tractors make earlier models look like pre-historic monstrosities and sell for about one-half the price, costing less than half to operate.

Massey-Harris is pleased to have taken a leading part in developing machines which are destined to play so important a part in making agriculture profitable.

The advent of the combine and now the greater popularity of the small combine has meant a striking decrease in the cost of harvesting. The combine which records show reached the height of their volume in the years just previous to the war, both in Canada and the United States; production in the latter country dropping from 215,386 in 1914 to 31,259 in 1937, thus losing the benefits of mass production gained in the years when the volume kept mounting.

Apart from the tremendously improved product offered in the binder of to-day, which accounts in no small way for its relatively increased price over pre-war years, the fact of the greatly decreased volume now manufactured makes the binder case to be the criterion of value offered by the implement industry.

Voices Of The Night

(By Archibald Rutledge In The Reader's Digest)

As a boy I was apprehensive of the mystery of the night. Every evening I used to ride seven miles through the lonely woodland for the mail, returning after midnight. Not a house was on the road, and it led past dim lagoons, glimmering swamp edges black pine thickets. I was only seven years old when this began, and my imagination had been filled with the stories the plantation negroes told me of hags, hants, bloodcucking bats as big as turkeys, of nameless horrors that stalked in the shadows of the old plantation burying grounds. A boy might be a mail-carrier at night—or he might be told ghost stories, but to be a rider in the dark and a semi-believer in all sorts of hants is too heavy a cross for a youngster to bear. And I was glad to escape from the strange touch of the night's velvet hands, from their haunting stillness and loneliness.

All my life, it seems, ever since those boyhood years, I have been obliged to be out late at night; on the plantation caring for the stock; continuing those rides for the mail; and coming home from all sorts of expeditions into the forest or out on the river. From fearing her, I began to be interested in her, and then to love her. Darkness and I have long since been intimates; and I think she has revealed more to me of Life's secret than day has divulged. For I have learned that the night has much beauty, and voices of poignant appeal to the heart, and silences full of mystic meaning. Always her white stars seem to me to be rising on immortality; always the night seems to be trying to show me patiently, with the infinite tenderness of a mother, something of the truth of the mighty trinity of existence—life, love and death.

One of the quaint appealing voices of the night is the lyric concert of the frogs. I used to lean in my horse by a starlit savanna to listen to them as they warn of the danger of riding through their quaking domain.

"Knee-deep! Knee-deep! Knee-deep!" pipe the elfin trebles. "Thigh-high! Thigh-high! Thigh-high!" the alto sing. "More! More! More!" the baritone warn. "You'd better go round! You'd better go round! You'd better go round!" thunders the profound bass of the old bull.

Whenever I hear frogs singing, I know that, even though dimly and obscurely, their hearts must be feeling a kind of joyous utterance. For somehow, hearts have an infallible way of being honest, whether wild or human, and whether they dwell in proud cities or in lonely marshes.

I remember hearing one night a sound that has ever since haunted my memory. Twenty feet above the ground I was at that time, on a platform that I had built among the branches of a long-leaved pine in order to make observations on wild life at night.

After having waited an hour or more, I heard something brush sedately through a green myrtle. Then into the patch of sand below me walked three deer. So quiet, so shadowy, so vividly unreal they were that they might easily have been taken for spirits. Indeed, one of the wonders of the night is the artless delivery, the felicitous stillness with which wild creatures travel the country of the silvery shadows. Deer have a fairy way of gliding along, of floating over obstacles, of crossing moonlit stretches of country with a certain beautiful stealth that has upon it the bloom of magic.

Wary wanderers were these three, a buck and two does. One doe was behind, and as she turned her beautiful head, she seemed listening to something in the bushes through which she had just come. She lowered her head. I heard her bleat softly. She was answered by one of the most pathetic and appealing sounds in all Nature—the bleating of a little fawn. A bush across the path had probably delayed it; but now into the clear moonlight it strolled up to its mother's side. She nuzzled it with tenderest affection. And the call of the little fawn I shall always remember as the sweetest and gentlest voice of the night that I ever heard.

As quietly as the deer had come they vanished. And now high over the pines I heard thin, sweet music of wild ducks' wings. They were speeding toward the delta, under the stars. Later I heard a wildcat scream. It cried only once. Once is enough. The bar-lynx is one of the most craftily silent of all living things; but when it does shriek, the sound is terrible and memorable.

And then two horned owls began one of their amazing conversations. The note of these birds has something about it singularly menacing. Its charm lies chiefly in its remote and baffling quality. I shall try to give a fragment of this weird gossiping:

"Hoot-a-loot, hoot-a-loot," says one owl, with a touch of infinite tenderness.

"Loot, hoot-a-loot," answers the other gently.

"Hoot, loot, hoot-a-loot," the first says, in a tone of exquisite modulation, more elegant in expression than much human conversation.

"Loot, hoot, loot," comes the reply, the sound fading like dying music, drifting mystically off into the far away and the long ago.

There is another night voice that has an especial charm for me. I hear it just after the hay and wheat are cut, when the first hint that the year is waning begins to appear. This is the whimpering sweet whistle of the upland plover, as he flies high in the still summer night, fluting a haunting human note. In its melting, romantic quality, I do not think the night whistling of this plover can be surpassed. To lie at evening on a bare little hill in a peaceful valley, conscious of the utter friendship of the grass, conscious of the gentleness of the sailing clouds, and to hear the upland plover's visionary voice aloft in the heavens, is to come close to the beating heart of the Eternal. Such communion may heal even that despair of medicine—weariness of the heart.

Always, I think, we must remember that Nature has the power to take as well as the power to give. There are, for example, in the night, certain of God's highwaymen—freebooters who rob us of all that we should not carry. The average persons is a caravan of cares. One star will rob me of doubt; the dusk wind in the pines will steal away my fear; a fall oak, shivering sweetly in some little breeze and shedding odoriferous dew, can take away anxiety.

From long and careful observation I am persuaded that there is at least one bird that sings in its sleep. Often in the dead of night, from some still grassfield, I have heard the field sparrow shrill its tiny evanescent song. It is not really so much of a song as a single trill. Usually it is given but once, though in the daytime it is repeated endlessly. It touches the heart to hear this tiny whistling later lift his voice in the vast cathedral of the night. It sounds as if a moonbeam, fairly touched like a tiny harpichord, had been made to vibrate elvin melody.

The night has, of course, its dissonances; the bold hooting of the barred owl; the distant barking of a fox; the raucous, sleep-deepening cries of the wild ducks. But these only serve to enhance the elemental beauty and wildness, and deepen the mystery and enchantment that are the night's.

SILAGE CROPS AND PROCESSES

"Silage and Crop-Preservation" is the title of a book published recently by Macmillan and Company. The author, Dr. B. J. Watson, director of the agricultural research station, Jett's Hill, England, discusses the various ways, old and new, of conserving for winter feeding the several forage crops of the farm. He describes processes of hay-making, silage production and the artificial drying of young protein-rich herbage. After reading Dr. Watson's book, says B. Leslie Emslie, chemist-agronomist, one recognizes the fortunate position of the livestock feeder who farms in a country where corn and alfalfa flourish to provide well-balanced carbohydrate-protein ration.

Over a wide area of Ontario, in portions of Quebec, the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia, both alfalfa and corn may be grown satisfactorily. But there are districts where either or both fail to produce yields sufficient to make their culture profitable. Then a mixture of green oats, peas and vetches may be ensiled instead of corn, or a root crop may replace the silage.

Corn is the ideal silage crop and when adequately matured and fertilized produces a large bulk of carbohydrate feed which requires to be supplemented, of course, with good alfalfa or other source of protein. Carbohydrates include the fibre, sugar and starches of plants. Fibre increases with maturity, and this explains why hay cut at a too advanced stage makes very poor feed.

Corn contains a considerable amount of sugar which produces the desirable lactic acid fermentation in the silo. When crops such as clover, young grass or peas, low in carbohydrates but high in protein, are ensiled the carbohydrates or sugar for the production of lactic acid is lacking, and other organic acids form to the detriment of the silage. Dr. Watson states that as long ago as 1885 an Italian named Giglioli discovered the merits of the mineral acid, hydrochloric, in promoting the fermentation of high-protein silage, and this is the basis of the more recent A.I.V. process. Objections to the A.I.V. are that it entails the handling of strong acids and careful measuring and weighing, since the strength of the solution has to be regulated according to the moisture and protein content of the green material, excess of acid being harmful.

The use of molasses as a source of sugar and lactic acid in the making of silage from forage plants high in protein is being adopted widely and successfully. From 20 to 50 pounds of molasses per ton of fresh, green material are sprinkled in a dilute solution as the silage is being filled. An important advantage is that excess of molasses does no harm. The molasses process is making headway in Canada. Some farmers who tried it experimentally with second-crop red clover, last year, constructed temporary silos of snow-fencing lined with stout building paper and reported good results.

Carotene of green plants, which gives the yellow color typical of butter and cream produced from rich spring herbage, is the source of Vitamin A, a potent influence in promoting health and growth of animals. Carotene, destroyed in haying, is retained largely in young herbage preserved by the molasses process.

WHY EXPERIMENTS

MUST BE REPEATED

Farmers sometimes ask why technical investigators repeat their experiments so many times; why they are so cautious in making practical recommendations; why for instance investigators at the Summerland Experimental Station have considered it necessary to conduct apple-thinning investigations over a period of eighteen years. The answer is, states R. C. Palmer, Dominion Experimental Station, Summerland, B.C., trained scientists know that a great deal of repetition is required to ensure accuracy in the results secured from experiments.

Repetition is especially important when experiments are being conducted with living materials because of the inherent variability of such material. No two cows are identical even though they may have exactly the same ancestry. There are small differences in structure and behaviour of any two plants, even though they may be of the same variety. Agricultural investigators take special precautions to reduce this natural variability in the experimental material with which they work. For instance, they may propagate all the plants to be used in a certain test from cuttings taken from one individual plant. However, even when such care has been taken to promote uniformity in material, experience has shown that it is still necessary to include several individual plants in each plot.

Then again the plots must be replicated, for it has been found that small variations in soil or other environmental conditions often have an important influence on the results secured. It is for this reason that experiments are commonly run in triplicate. Investigators have also found that seasonal weather conditions often affect the results of experiments to a very marked degree. Accordingly, it is considered advisable to repeat many experiments every year for a period of several years.

Repetition of experiments takes time and space and labor, but it is essential in order to ensure reliability in the results secured. Accordingly, farmers must learn to be patient with the investigators who are endeavoring to solve agricultural problems. These scientists are well trained. They know their job. Given the necessary time and facilities they can be counted on to produce results of great practical value to the man on the land.

The World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strang, Director, Research Department, Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

A notable victory has once again been won by Canadian Agricultural Scientists over the destructive forces of nature.

Another valuable rust-resistant wheat has been released—No. 9751, which will now reign under the royal name of Regent.

The variety is a Canadian product, having been bred, selected and tested by the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory, Winnipeg, in co-operation with the Dominion Experimental Farms, our Canadian Universities and the National Research Council.

About 1,400 bushels only are available, which quantity is now being distributed to a large number of farmers who, some time ago, applied for it.

The announcement about Regent is made in Winnipeg. This is appropriate because the wheat was bred in Winnipeg, and the very first practical step, too, in the Canadian fight against rust was taken in Winnipeg in 1917 by the spectacular removal by the Parks Board of 3,000 barberry bushes.

I venture, therefore, to propose that the City of Winnipeg should set a special day apart to celebrate this great victory over rust, so that we can all publicly pay a tribute to those talented scientists who have added so greatly to the income of our farmers and who have added consequently to the wealth of all the people of Canada.

Following factors have tended to raise prices: Spain takes considerable quantities of Argentine wheat—Indian rice crop much smaller than last year—Jacoa grub damaging Argentine corn crop. Spain expected to buy fair quantities of Roumanian wheat—Small surplus in Roumania and Balkans—Unfavorable rains may delay Argentine corn harvest.

Following factors have tended to lower prices: Spring sowing under way in Europe—Tunisia pressing offers of durum wheat—Favorable South African corn prospects—Argentine corn abundant but less than anticipated—Slight upward revision of Australian wheat estimate—Indian wheat conditions improve and estimates raised—Rumors that governmental price assistance to Canadian wheat will be discontinued.

When pressing a pair of trousers, by putting a little new starch in the water used for dampening the pressing cloth. You, as well as the man-of-the-family, will be delighted to see how much longer the trousers stay pressed when this is done.

If you've ever been bothered with the wandering crumb problem when grating or grinding bread, simply grate—or grind—the bread into a large paper bag. This not only solves the problem but leaves the crumbs in the paper bag, ready for storing, as well.

If the name BANANA BUTTER SCOTCH ICE CREAM sets up little appetite longings, this recipe guarantees that the outcome will be just what the anticipation:

Combine 1 pint milk, 1 pint coffee cream, 1 cup brown sugar and a dash of salt, and beat to the scalding point. Remove from flame and slowly stir in 2 well-beaten eggs. Cool and then blend in 1/4 cup ripe banana pulp and 1 tablespoon vanilla extract. Pour in freezing container of modern ice cream freezer, filling it not more than 3/4 full; assemble freezer and cover. Surround with a mixture of 3 parts crushed ice and 1 part rock salt.

Turn crank slowly but steadily for 5 to 10 minutes, or until turning becomes difficult. Then carefully remove cover, lift out dasher, and pack down ice cream with a spoon. Replace cover and draw off water. Replenish ice and salt mixture, cover, and allow to stand at least 1 hour before serving. Serves 6 to 8.

If you want to save a lot of time and energy when you are measuring a hem for a dress, just fasten your yard stick into a monkey wrench. This will keep the stick or ruler upright without being held, and the wrench is weighty enough to "stay put." Then all you have to do is to put the pins in place while the person being fitted turns slowly around.

Keeping pantry and cupboard shelves clean is indeed a task, even when they are covered with oilcloth. You will find, however, that the oilcloth will stay clean much longer if you apply a thin coat of floor wax, rubbing it in well. The wax coating also prolongs the life of the oilcloth as canes and jars will not stick to the surface. Rewax about once a year.

The tenon season welcomes a time-saving suggestion such as this for all house-makers who have been bothered with having fish stick to the pan. First, heat the frying pan. Then shake a little salt into it (the amount that would ordinarily be used to salt the fish) and let it brown and jump about before adding the food or other cooking fat. When the fat is hot, add the fish, dipped in egg and flour or cornmeal, and fry slowly. The fish will not stick at all.

Here is a most unusual and delectable sandwich spread that can be made up and stored in the refrigerator for "snack-time" occasions:

Place 3 tablespoons dry mustard, 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1/4 cup milk in top of double boiler. Blend in 2 slightly-beaten eggs and 1/4 cup mild vinegar and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Remove from flame and add 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 6 tablespoons soft butter, and one 8-oz. package cream cheese. Stir until blended, and then add 1/4 cup pimiento (chopped), 1/4 cup olives (chopped), 2 tablespoons pickle (chopped) and 1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped). If stored in the modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator, this filling need not be kept in a covered dish. In the clean, washed, sterilized jar it will retain its smooth consistency and natural pungent flavor for a week or so. Makes 1 1/2 cups of sandwich filling.

THE COMING ROYAL VISIT

Much controversy is being heard these days on the street as to the manner in which the matter of the visit of the King and Queen to Wainwright is to be handled so that all and sundry may have the opportunity of seeing Their Majesties during the period their train will be here on the morning of June 3rd next.

In this connection it might be well to point out that practically all the school children from the newly-formed Wainwright School Division (amounting in all to possibly some 1,500) could be arranged for to be here in Wainwright early enough on that morning to be present when the royal train pulls in at 8:55 a.m., and those, with their parents, could be formed up into lines and thus given the opportunity sought of extending a hearty welcome to the visitors.

It is surely not too early at this time to make plans which will cover this project, and it would seem fitting that Mayor Middlemass call a public meeting of all citizens for an expression of opinion in this regard and to formulate plans.

The suggestion put forth by a correspondent in this issue that possibly the day could be made the town's annual celebration day for this year instead of the usual July 1st, might prove a happy one; and it should be no trouble for our townspeople to work in committees to the end that the whole would be such an affair as to prove an outstanding event in the history of Wainwright.

Although several other towns—of the line of travel of the royal train—are making arrangements to have their children given the opportunity of seeing Their Majesties in the cities, it would seem a short-sighted policy if Wainwright does not take hold of this as a territorial project, and handle it, and thus reap the advantage of having the big throng who are sure to gather here under such circumstances as visitors for the whole day, with the added advantage of their spending power.

THE REAL WESTERN PROBLEM

The Dominion Government is considering a plan that will help to increase the revenue of Western farmers in their present time of great need and distress.

This thoughtful, generous and kindly assistance will be welcomed by all in the West. No doubt the government is actuated by the realization that the Canadian high tariffs are adding greatly to the cost of the things Western farmers have to buy. (Babson's Index shows that it costs our farmers now 33 per cent more for the things they have to buy for production and living than before the war.)

In all discussions taking place about the governmental proposals, however, it is, we feel, most important that the real and fundamental issue should not be lost sight of, which is winning back world markets which are now lost, but which our wheat once enjoyed; for it is obvious of course that no amount of bonus given by the Dominion Government to the West, helpful to farmers as it will be, can ever in itself sell one single bushel extra of wheat. Only the lowering of tariffs and the removal of other restrictions to trade will ever solve the real difficulty which, for the first time in 62 years, now faces the West.

... that of recovering markets lost by high tariffs.

The letter box will hold itself responsible for answers should be by correspondence. All letters must be clearly marked with name and address but not longer than 300 words.

The Editor.

Dear Sir—I read with interest in a recent issue of your paper that Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth will stop for a short time in Wainwright on June 3rd next. I think that the people of the town should consider it a great honor that our home town was included on the crowded itinerary of the Royal Couple, and that they should make the best of a good thing.

Trusting that they are open for suggestions regarding the Royal Visit I am submitting the following: That a general holiday be proclaimed for that day, and that the town's annual sports day be held on the day of the Royal Visit this year instead of on July 1st.

I consider this a good idea for a number of reasons. It is only once in a lifetime that our town will be so honored, and a celebration is very much in order.

Undoubtedly there will be a large number of visitors in Wainwright to see Their Majesties, and it would really advertise the hospitality of the town if something were prepared to entertain them after the Royal Train has speeded on its way eastward. It would give them a day worth remembering for the rest of their lives.

From the financial standpoint I don't see how the plan can lose. The Royal Visit plus the usual gala sports day would attract visitors from miles around.

But it would be better to leave it alone than put up the half-hearted show that characterized July 1st for a number of years prior to 1938. Everyone has to get behind it and really push!

Come on, fellow townsmen. How about dropping that lead we seem to have been carrying in our shoes and waking Wainwright from its stupor into a town that we can once more be proud of.

Thanking you for the use of your columns and hoping this idea goes over,

DOUG. WALLACE

Edmonton.

Higher Wage Levels Lower Prices, Profits Feature Cotton Ind.

The International Labor Office at Geneva states that Canada is a high wage country in the textile world, ranking in the first bracket with the United States. Local textile wages are five times as high as Japan, India and China. They are twice as high as Italy, Poland and Hungary. And they are 33 per cent higher than Great Britain, Germany and Sweden. It is therefore not surprising that the wages in the Canadian cotton manufacturing industry are found to form a large proportion (over 50 per cent) of the cost of turning the raw material into a saleable article. These local textile products are sold across Canada in competition with goods from other countries, where wages are as much smaller proportion of the cost of manufacture.

The trend of Canadian mill prices, as well as the level of profits, indicates that the local cotton industry has made every effort to meet this competition. From an examination of the prices reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, it is clear that the reductions in prices since 1930 at which the Canadian mills have sold typical fabrics have been greater than the reductions in raw material prices. In other words, Canadian mills have shortened their margins to secure business.

These profit margins are shown in data collected by the Turgeon Royal Commission on Textiles to have averaged in the period 1936-38 a net return on the shareholders' equity of only 4.4 per cent per annum.

ALBERTA GROWS SEED PEAS

Because a parasite that attacks seed peas in almost every growing section of this continent cannot survive the Alberta climate, seed peas growing has become a new prairie enterprise with a payroll of over $20,000 a year, says a writer in the current issue of the C-I-L. Oval, the magazine of Canadian Industries Limited. The growing of seed peas is a carefully regulated business necessitating the weekly inspection of the fields and extensive irrigation. Every seed pea is picked by hand and inspected for flaws before being sold, says the writer.

Cultivation of the peas on irrigated land allows remarkably accurate estimates of the yield to be made in advance. Hail is the only enemy to the raising of a successful crop, the threat of root rot and seed rot, which previously prevented pea-growing in Alberta's cold soil, having been overcome by treating the seeds with a mercury dust disinfectant before sowing.

On regular schedules, carrying mail and express, Trans-Canada Air Lines planes now travel 6,440 miles every day. The distance between Montreal and Vancouver is 7,568 miles, covered by two daily trips, one eastbound and one west. The return flights are made daily over the 122 miles between Vancouver and Seattle and one return trip between Lethbridge and Edmonton, 288 miles.

.....AND NOW OIL!

★ Canada's strength as a Dominion is built on the strength of her inter-dependent Provinces. Each of them shares in the production of the others; each contributes to the power of the Dominion as a whole.

With over 700,000 people, producing $300,000,000 of wealth every year from agriculture, livestock, mining, trapping, fisheries, manufacturing, exporting some 7,000,000 tons of their products; with some 60,000 miles of roads, with 100,000 registrations of cars—passenger, truck and farm equipment; entertaining some 25,000 tourist cars, and thousands of visitors that come by rail, one would say Alberta is "tops".

But in addition to all these riches—these grain fields, these immense flocks and herds, these mines and plants—new word has come of the Turner Valley Oil Fields, estimated to be the largest in the British Empire.

Potential production of the field is now 18,900,000 barrels per annum. Two new refineries will be built in Calgary at a cost of $2,250,000, and a half million dollars will be spent in additions to an existing plant. The payroll of the Turner Valley Oil Field will approximate $500,000 per month.

The significance to Canadians is that this gift of nature is located within the Confederation of Canadian Provinces—The Dominion—and therefore is one of the assets of the Empire. Alberta is great in her own right, but as one of a united series of Provinces stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific she enjoys the prestige and standing of the Nation itself. Ask for Facts and Figures concerning the Automotive Industries and the work they are doing in Canada, and we will send them.

This advertisement is one of a series dealing with the Provinces of Canada, and will appear in many daily and weekly newspapers in the Dominion.

BUILDING CANADIAN MOTOR CARS is a National Enterprise

The establishment of Canada's Automotive Industry has resulted in the creation of a home market of inestimable value to each and every one of the Provinces. The interchange of goods and money can be appreciated when one remembers that this industry alone spends in the Dominion every year on an average of $130,000,000 which finds its way to every part of Canada. In turn, Canadians purchase Canadian-built cars, thus keeping money in Canada and helping employment. No dollar stays where it is made but is distributed gradually to the most remote part of the Dominion. The Automotive Industry is national in purpose and National in scope. When you buy a Canadian-built car, you help your own Province.

Demon's Decoy - by Mildred Snow Gleason

CHAPTER XXVI

From behind one of the doors came Nurse Hilton's voice, harsh and angry. "I tell you, Professor," she was saying, "I had to let Payne go up to her. You know perfectly well that there will be more danger for us if they don't trust me."

"Danger?" Meres' sardonic laugh made Elizabeth feel sick and cold. "We're not in danger. They are the only ones in danger now!"

So Nurse Hilton was double-crossing them, after all! Elizabeth leaped against the wall to steady herself. She shivered as she thought just how much she and Stephen had taken the nurse into their confidence.

Then, she heard her speaking again. "Don't be too sure there is no danger for us. Dr. Payne's clever and now that busybody Dudley has turned up."

Meres' voice cut in. "Why worry about Miss Dudley? You yourself sent her back to Belrut with the message that she was going to stay here for a few days."

"Yes, but when she doesn't report for this new job she's got, some one is sure to investigate."

"What if I told you she has no job?" Meres replied, with a grim chuckle.

Elizabeth leaned closer to the closed door, straining to hear every word.

"Then," she heard the nurse say, "you think she came here to spy?"

"Yes—but that's her misfortune, not ours. I'm sorry, though, that she will have to disappear with the rest. I rather like the woman. She has character."

"I've got a lot more than she ever thought of having," Nurse Hilton laughed derisively.

"Yes—you have," the professor agreed.

"That's why I told Morris, the night the girl arrived, that we'd have to have you in with us."

"Are you sure it wasn't because I knew too much?" the nurse asked skeptically.

"No. Mrs. Graham also knew too much—and she has an unfortunate accident, but you didn't because I knew a woman like you could be a big help to us. I knew that you weren't squeamish and that the rewards were bound to interest you."

Meres stopped a moment, then went on, with a little laugh.

"Morris was flustered that night the girl arrived. He kept repeating that she wasn't born the same year as the Brown children. As though one year made any difference! With all the faking of documents that had to be done, it was easy enough to remedy that."

Elizabeth drew a long breath. So this was the meaning of the conversation she and Stephen had overheard that first night.

"The next thing to do," she heard Meres continue, "is to start dishing the girl."

"There's time enough for that," Nurse Hilton put in. "The next thing is to get rid of Payne!"

"Oh, that," Meres said coolly. "That is being taken care of right now."

"You mean..."

"I mean that, within a few minutes, he'll cease to bother us any more."

For a second, horrified by this ominous news, Elizabeth thought she was going to faint.

Then, quickly, she turned and ran back along the corridor to the laboratory, a sudden, desperate plan in her mind. She had only one thought—Stephen must be saved.

Her head throbbed as she ran. She reached the laboratory and, in a moment, had found a bottle of acid.

A second later, she was on her way back down the hall.

When she again reached the door to the room in which Nurse Hilton and Meres had been talking, she stopped and drew a long breath.

Then, she turned the knob and flung the door open.

"Don't move!" she said in a tense voice, making a threatening gesture with the bottle of acid.

"Where?"

She paused, suddenly seeing that Nurse Hilton was now alone. The nurse was staring at her in amazement.

"Where is Stephen?" Elizabeth finished.

"I don't know."

"You're lying! Take me to him or..."

The nurse paled. "That is a dreadful weapon you have there. Be careful! You might blind me."

"Yes," said Elizabeth grimly. "I tell you I don't know where he is!"

Nurse Hilton's voice quivered. "Then find out!" Elizabeth's eyes were dangerously bright. "And don't try to double cross me because, no matter what you do, I'll be able to throw this acid at you first! Now, go ahead of me and ask Professor Meres where Stephen is!"

The nurse obeyed without another word. She started down the hall toward Michael's room, but it seemed to Elizabeth that she was deliberately taking her time.

"Quickly!" Elizabeth ordered.

"Faster!"

With a startled glance, the nurse increased her pace almost to a run. When they reached Michael's room, she knocked on the door.

"Professor Meres?" she called. "It's Hilton! I must see you at once! Open the door! Please!" There was a real fear in her voice.

A second later, the door opened and the professor stood on the threshold.

"What do you want?" he asked coldly.

As he spoke, the floor suddenly shook, and a dull explosion echoed through the corridor.

CHAPTER XXVII

All the color faded from Elizabeth's face, and she stood perfectly motionless, so paralyzed by horror that even her heart seemed to have stopped beating.

Professor Meres took advantage of that moment. With a quick movement, he caught her by the wrist and forced her to let go of the bottle of acid. Then, turning, he walked calmly back into the room and threw the bottle out of a window. There was a shatter of glass as it hit a stone walk.

Elizabeth covered her face with her hands.

"Stephen..." oh, Stephen, she sobbed, over and over.

As though from a great distance, she heard excited Arab voices, and then, a few minutes later, heard Ahmed speaking.

"Room blow up. Fire start, but not now."

"Good!" said Meres. He put a hand on Elizabeth's shoulder.

"And now, young lady," he said, in a hard voice, "perhaps you will explain your crazy performance."

"It doesn't matter now," Elizabeth muttered. "Nothing matters."

"Snap out of it!" Meres shook her. "Pull yourself together!"

Elizabeth suddenly jerked free, and struck him in the face.

"You devil!" she cried. "You'll be made to suffer for this!"

Meres looked at her steadily for a moment with steel-cold eyes. Then he turned to Nurse Hilton.

"What's all this about?"

The nurse, very pale, seemed unable to speak.

Elizabeth laughed shortly—a laugh that ended on a sob. "Nurse Hilton is disturbed by—by this horrible thing you've done! I hope it hurts her until she dies!"

"If I knew what this melodrama was about," Meres murmured, "I might be able to make some fitting remarks."

"Oh, stop pretending!" Elizabeth cried, her voice rising hysterically. "I overheard your conversation with Nurse Hilton a few minutes ago, and I know that you—you have murdered Stephen!"

Again she covered her face with her hands, and shook with sobs.

Meres did not speak for a minute. "An unfortunate explosion is not murder," he said finally. "The explosion occurred in Dr. Payne's own small laboratory. Explosions do occur in laboratories, Miss Brown."

Elizabeth tried to speak, but could not.

"Take her to her room," Meres instructed the nurse.

Elizabeth, still sobbing, allowed herself to be led away.

Left alone in her room, she dropped on the bed and cried heartbrokenly

The perfect form in which tobacco can be smoked!

Elizabeth suddenly burst into tears of relief. Stephen, puzzled, soothed her until she had regained control of herself.

"Now, tell me," he said. She did. When she had finished, Stephen whistled.

"This is very strange," he murmured. "Evidently, somebody was determined not to let them kill me."

LENTEN RECIPES

Fish in Lemon Aspic

2 tablespoons (2 envelopes) gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
Sprinkle gelatin on top of water.
Add:
1 1/2 cups hot water
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 cup lemon juice
Cool and add:
1 cup of any cooked or canned fish, flaked
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
1 cup chopped celery
Chill in individual molds. Unmold on crisp salad greens. With asparagus cut fish-shaped garnishes from lemons. Accompany with Lemon Tartare Sauce in baskets made from lemons. Serves 4-6.

Lemon Tartare Sauce

1 cup lemon mayonnaise
1/2 teaspoon onion juice or 1 tablespoon chopped chives
2 tablespoons chopped sweet pickles or green relish
Lemon juice
Combine, thinning to desired consistency with lemon juice. Serves 6-8. For variation: Add chopped celery, capers, chili sauce, Worcestershire sauce, Angostura, or Tabasco.

Fish Salad Californian

(Serves 6)
1/2 cup lemon, pulp and juice—see paragraph below
2 cups shredded lettuce
1/2 cup finely chopped celery
2 cups flaked salmon (or tuna)
3 tablespoons minced pimiento
Combine. Serve with mayonnaise. Cut the lemon in small pieces, using a sharp knife or scissors. Remove all the membrane possible, save juice and use with chopped pulp.

"Over the Sea"

Line a good sized salad bowl with crisp lettuce. Put in 3 cups cold boiled rice and cover with 1/2 cup olive oil. Chop olives, green peppers, onion and canned salmon together; mix well, dig little beds in the rice and bury a tablespoon at a time. Serve with the following dressing: Mix 2 teaspoons curry powder with 4 tablespoons salad mustard, slowly adding 6 tablespoons sweet cream and 1/2 teaspoon sugar. Grate egg yolk over the top of the bowl, and garnish with rings made from the white of an egg. Serves 6.

PROOF OF THE PUDDING

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Never a truer word was written. As children like puddings, men clamor for them and women find them easy to prepare. Well, we offer a real pudding recipe for your consideration today.

Chocolate Cottage Pudding

1 1/4 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 egg yolks, well beaten
1 1/2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup milk
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream well. Add egg yolks and beat thoroughly; then chocolate and vanilla. Add flour, alternately with milk, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in egg whites. Turn into greased pan, 8x8x2 inches. Bake in moderate oven (325° F.) 50 minutes, or until done. Remove from pan. Serve warm or cold with plain or whipped cream. Serves 12.

COOKIES THAT DON'T NEED COOKING ARE A REAL NOVELTY FOR DESSERT

It sounds like magic to suggest cookies made without cooking. But the are a delightful culinary fact. You can whisk them together ahead of time and put them into the refrigerator to "bake". Then pop them out to serve with custard or fruit or ice cream at dessert time. They are thrifty as well as easy to make with sweetened condensed milk. You can count on scoring a triumph because these recipes are guaranteed failure proof.

Unbaked Brownies

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1-3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
2 cups (1-3 pound) vanilla wafer crumbs
1 cup finely chopped walnut meats

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir over boiling water 5 minutes until mixture thickens. Add vanilla wafer crumbs and 1/2 cup finely chopped nut meats. Butter shallow pan and sprinkle with 1/4 cup nut meats. Place chocolate mixture in pan and spread evenly, using a knife dipped in hot water. Sprinkle top with remaining 1/4 cup chopped nuts. Chill in refrigerator 6 hours or overnight.

To serve, cut in squares. Makes 18.

Magic Peanut Butter Whirls

2 cups (1-3 pound) vanilla wafer crumbs
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
Sweetened condensed milk (approximately 7 tablespoons)
1-3 cup peanut butter
Roll vanilla wafers to crumbs and add flavoring. Add 4 tablespoons of sweetened condensed milk, blending thoroughly. Add remaining sweetened condensed milk, a spoonful at a time, until mixture becomes thick paste. Pat out flat on wax paper (in an oblong pan 10x6 inches) and let stand until surface dries a little (about 15 minutes). Spread with peanut butter and roll up like a small jelly roll. Chill. Serve cut in thin slices.

Canadian Codfish Balls

1 cup freshened shredded codfish
1/2 tablespoon butter
2 1/2 cups mashed potatoes
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 egg (slightly beaten)

Cook potatoes until tender, drain thoroughly and return to kettle in which they were cooked. Shake over the heat until thoroughly dry, mash well, add butter and pepper and beat until light; add flaked codfish, beaten egg, and continue beating until mixture is light and fluffy. Add more salt if necessary. Make the balls by dropping from a spoon. Fry in deep fat (385° F.) for one minute. Drain on brown paper. (If cakes stick to hand when being shaped for frying, roll lightly in small amount of flour). Makes about nine cakes. Serves 4-5.

Heat condensed tomato soup just as it comes from the can. Pour the hot tomato sauce in a platter or chop plate and place the golden brown codfish balls in the hot sauce.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Apples will not turn brown as quickly when peeled, if you add a pinch of salt to the water in which you are washing them.

Fried onions should first be boiled for about fifteen minutes and allowed to cool before cutting into slices for frying. This makes them nice and tender.

Beets can be given a delectable flavor by adding a teaspoonful of grated horse radish to the cooked buttered beets.

Baked potatoes can be much improved by rubbing a bit of bacon fat over the skin before the potato is put into the oven.

Sausages should be boiled for about five minutes before frying them. This prevents the sausages from shrinking when fried.

If the steak catches fire when you are frying it—don't try to blow it out. Throw salt on it.

Poached Eggs. A bit of vinegar added to the water in which poached eggs are cooked keeps the white of the eggs from spreading.

Cracked Eggs. Before boiling a cracked egg, rub the crack with butter. If an egg shell cracks while you are boiling it, you can prevent the white from spreading by adding a bit of salt to the water.

Salty Soup. If the soup is too salty don't throw it out. Slice a potato into the soup, and bring to a boil for a few minutes. The salty flavor will disappear. Remove the potato and serve the soup.

Cooked Custard. If you run a silver knife in a cooked custard you can tell whether it is baked or not. The silver knife should come out clean. If it doesn't, the custard will prove to be only half baked.

If the pitcher drips rub a bit of butter over the lip.

In the letter published last week over the signature of Mr. H. C. Link, the suggestion that a program of "athletic events for scholars" be arranged was meant to cover all scholars of districts which trade in Wainwright; this oversight occurring through the omission of a line in the publication.

The Legion Notice Board

Our next regular executive meeting will be held next Monday at the usual time and place.

Each year as the time for Vimy or Armistice Day approaches, it seems to be increasingly difficult to arouse that enthusiasm which, up to now, has enabled us to put it over. Perhaps this is true of other organizations besides ours. Be that as it may we print below a few verses that seem particularly apropos at the present time:

Are you an active member,
The kind that would be missed,
Or are you just contented
That your name is on the list?

Do you attend the meetings,
And mingle with the flock,
Or do you stay at home
To criticize and knock?

Do you take an active part
To help the work along,
Or are you satisfied
Merely to belong?

Do you ever go to visit
A member that is sick,
Or leave the work to just a few,
And talk about the clique?

Think this over, member—
You know right from wrong;
Are you an active member,
Or do you just belong?
—Joseph McGuire.

Mrs. Ganderton journeyed to the city for a couple of days last week, where she was busy buying her new Spring and Summer stock.

Mr. Schumacker, the new butcher, has now moved his family into their new home on Fourth avenue east.

Mr. and Mrs. Howarth spent a day or two in the city on business last week.

It is pleasing to see Jack Telford getting around again with his old cheery smile after his long-continued illness.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Snyder left by auto on Sunday last bound for a visit with relatives in California, and a trip to the San Francisco fair.

A number of young folks were admitted to the rolls of the United church on Sunday morning last in a baptismal service conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. E. Armstrong.

Thanks to the chinook winds of the past week end nearly all the snow has now disappeared, and streets and roads are now drying rapidly.

A pleasant party by way of farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Holt was held in the L.O.O.F. hall on Friday evening last when some 40 couples of the younger set had an enjoyable time. A framed buffalo picture was presented to the guests of honor as a parting gift.

Mr. A. G. Smith, supt. of the National Park, and Mr. E. Cotton, chief warden, were among those in attendance at the Davison funeral in Edmonton last week.
